Animals names and sounds in english

A name is an unofficial term for a word or phrase that denotes a person, place, or thing. A noun that calls any of the same species or class (such as a queen, a hamburger, or a city) is called a common name. A noun that names a particular class member (Elizabeth II, Big Mac, Chicago) is called the right name. The correct names are usually written with original letters. Onomastics is the study of the right names, especially the names of people (anthropones) and places (toponims). Etymology: From Greek, name Pronunciation: NAM Also known as: correct name Jack: I have not met your boyfriend. Liz Lemon: His name is Floyd.Jack: It's unfortunate. (Alec Baldwin and Tina Fey in the movie Corporate Crush, 30 Rock, 2007) I wonder how some names sound good and some sound bad. Names with soft consonants, such as m, n and l, tend to sound more pleasant than names with such consonants as k and g. Imagine that we are approaching a planet where two alien races live. One of the races is called the Lamonians. The other is called Grataks. What sounds like a friendlier race? Most people choose the Lamonics because the name sounds friendlier. Grataks sound disgusting. (David Crystal, Little Book of Language. Who could resist the temptation of unusual names of England? High Easter, New Delight, Kingston Bagguize, Sleeping Green, Tiptoe, Nether Wallop, Nymphsfield, Christmas Common, Samslesbury Bottoms, Thyme Intrinseca, Huish Champflower, Buckland-tout-Saints, Wyre Piddle, Martin Husingtree, Norton-Justa-Twycross and so on, gazeteer dreams. (Jeremy Paxman, English: Portrait of the People. Overlook, 2000) I fell in love with American names, sharp names that never get fat, snake-skinned names mining claims, plumed war hood medicine hat, Tucson and Deadwood and Lost Mule Flat . . . (Stephen Vincent Benet, American Names, 1927) There is no sharp dividing line between common words and the right names. They feed on each other. Many medieval surnames began as common nouns, especially those associated with professions: Archer, Baker, Barber, Brewer, Butcher, Carpenter, Cook, Farmer, Fisher, Goldsmith, Mason, Miller, Parson, Shepherd, Smith, Taylor, Thatcher, Weaver Some are less obvious today. Trinder? Kolesnik. Fletcher? He's a shot. Lorimer? Spurs- maker... Everyday words can be turned into the name of a place, as circumstances require. The world's exploration routes are full of titles such as Cape Catastrophe, Skull Creek, and Mount Pleasant, as well as encouraging names like Concord, Glory, and Niceville. The same trend is observed in the streets, parks, embankments, embankments, markets and all other places where we live. (David Crystal, words, words, words. Oxford University Press, 2006) Mythical view of language, which universally precedes the philosophical view of it, always this indifference of words and things. Here the essence of everything is contained in his his Magical powers are attached directly to the word. Those who master the name and know how to use it have gained power over the object; he made it his own with all his energies. All the magic of the word and the magic of the name are based on the assumption that the world of things and the world of names form a single undifferentiate chain of causation and therefore a single reality. (Ernst Cassirer, Philosophy of Symbolic Forms: Language. People like to call things. I am not just referring to public transport facilities such as locomotives, ships and planes, or names given to commercial facilities by their manufacturers. I mean personal, private names for everyday items such as refrigerators, lawn mowers and wheelbarrows... Back in the 1980s, in the program for the English Now series that I presented on Radio 4, I asked listeners to send examples of the objects they named. I was expecting dozens of letters. I got hundreds. The man wrote to say his car was called Wilberforce. One woman said her vacuum cleaner was known as J. At least two garden sheds were called Tardis. In the kingdom there was a waste disposal unit called Wally, a kettle named Herbie, an ashtray named Cedric and an oil knife named Marlon. Maybe there is more... The principle, obviously, is that if you have an object that has a special functional or emotional meaning to you, you give it a name. Often this name is known only to your family members. It's part of the home dialect - or family - that's in every family. (David Crystal. Hook or Crook: Journey in Search of English. The Overlook Press, 2008) The effect was a bit like what is produced by people who in conversation constantly use the name of the person they say: you can go years without noticing it, but once you do it it's hard not to be distracted by it - it's hard, in fact, not to feel that it's specifically designed to drive you crazy. (John Lanchester, Capital W. W. Norton, 2012) Taboo on the use of personal names is reported in a variety of cultures. Details vary from language to language, but it's common for people to be reluctant to reveal their own real names. In many small societies, names are not used as much. Instead, people were often approached or referred to as relatives, such as son or sister of the father. In some societies, people have two names, a real name they keep secret, and an additional name or nickname that is revealed to outsiders. In other societies people will turn to a third party to announce their name when someone asks because there is a taboo on uttering their own name (Frazer 1911b: 244-6). (Barry Blake, secret language. Oxford University Press, 2010) Why don't these guys named Allen, Alyn and Alan come together and decide how . . . to write their name? I'm tired of guessing. Same with Sean, And Sean. Stop all these cute attempts to be different. If you want to be call herself Margaret Mary. (George Carlin, when will Jesus bring pork chops? Hyperion, 2004) Getty Images If the children's song Old Macdonald had farm taught us anything, it's that from dogs to donkeys, every animal has the sound that defines them. In English, the phrases are quite funny, so WomansDay.com we were curious to know how creatures sound in different countries. Below is a look at how different languages from around the world interpret the noises that 13 different animals have. You may be able to find more information about this and similar content on piano.io If the cow speaks mu in English, what does he speak Spanish? Moo, of course. But when we talk about sounds that animals make in different languages, it's not always that simple. Although the words we give to animals are examples of onomatopoeia (onomatopeya, in Spanish) - words that are designed to mimic sounds, these sounds are not perceived equally in all languages or cultures. Keep in mind that some of these terms may vary from country to country and that there may well be other, additional terms to use. (Having variations of terms should not be surprising, consider how in English we use different words to mimic the sound a dog makes, such as bark, bow-wow, ruff-ruff, and arf.) There may also be many spelling alternatives to these animal sounds. Also, note that in Spanish, you can use the verb hacer (do) to put the sound verb form. For example, one could say Swinya oinks, saying: el cerdo hace oink-oink. The following list of animal sounds shows sounds made by various Spanish-speaking animals. You will notice that some terms are similar to English, such as abeja (bee) sounding like bzzz is similar to our buzz. Special forms of verb, where they exist, are marked in brackets following the word (s) for animal sound. English forms follow the dash. See the sounds of animals in Spanish below, compiled by Katherine Ball of the Department of Linguistics at Georgetown University: abeja (bee): bzzz (zumbar) - buzzb'ho (owl): uu uu (ulular) - who, hoo, hootburro (donkey): iii-aaah (rebuznar) - heehawcaballo (horse): n-a-a-ycabra (goat): bee (balar) - b-a-a-acerdo (pig): oink-oink, oinc-oinc (grunir) - oinkcuo (cuckoo): c'c' c'cu - cuckoocuervo (crow): cruaaac-cruaaac - cawgallina (cawgallina) , kara-kara-cara -cluckgallo (rooster): ki-kiri-ki (cantar) - rooster-a-doodle-dogato (cat): miau (maullar) : grrrr, grgrgr (rugir) - roar, growlmono (monkey): i-i-loveja (sheep): bee, i (balar) - b-a-hpaloma (pigeon): cu-curre-cu-se (arrullar) - coopato (duck): cuac cuac - quackpavo (Turkey): glugle - gobbleperro (dog): guau guau arph, rufflilito (chicken): peo-pao - chirrana (frog): berp, croac (croar) - ribbit, croaktigre (tiger): ggggrrrr, grgrgr (rugir) - roar, growlwaca (cow): mu, muu (mughir) - mu mu mu
